Football (Australian Rules)

- 30 T.W.SHERRIN ARCHIVE:
 [The first Australian rules football was invented by T.W.Sherrin in 1880, when he was given a misshapen rugby ball to fix. He designed the Sherrin with indented rather than pointy ends to give the ball a better bounce. Sherrin began production in 1897 in a workshop in Collingwood, which had produced sporting goods since the 1880s. The sport known as football, or "footy", was rapidly increasing in popularity, and Sherrin footballs soon became the icon for being the first ball made for Australian rules football. Sherrin footballs still remain the most popular among leagues, players, and footy fans].
 This archive holds some important early mementos of his beginnings as a saddler, the setting up of his business in Collingwood, and the development and protection of his trademarks during the 1920s and 1930s.
- A. Three original handwritten character references for Sherrin from his earliest employers; Robert Reany, dated 16/6/1880; Francis Sanderson, dated 22/12/1883; and Stibbles & Pash dated 30/4/1885 regarding Sherrin's "good character"; together with a small folded promotional card from latter business.
 - B. Three letters from Government House, Melbourne, to Sherrin, dated Nov.1891, Jan.1892 and Nov.1892 regarding His Excellency (John Hope, 7th Earl of Hopetoun - later first Governor-General of Australia) trialing Sherrin's first sample cricket balls. The final letter has its reward: "We have tried the sample cricket balls which you sent, and found them very useful & satisfactory". Together with one envelope from Government House to Sherrin at 22 Wellington Street, Collingwood.
 - C. Sherrin was in business and finally founded his shop in Collingwood. Included here is Sherrin's copy of the original lease agreement for Sherrin to take two shops numbers 32 and 34 Wellington Street, Collingwood, from 24/9/94 - a critical date in the creation of sporting goods in Australia.
 - D. Collingwood Football Club's annual report for March 1903, noting Collingwood's 1902 Premiership & T.W.Sherrin as a committee member, and the club awarding Sherrin the appointment as a Life Governor of the Melbourne Hospital. Together with "Victorian Football League, Constitution, Rules, Permits and Laws of the Game, 1903" (incomplete). Also an original printed invitation from Mr Syd Sherrin to a party for Collingwood players on 27/9/1913.
 - E. 19pp Correspondence in 1926 between TW Sherrins, Syd Sherrin, Ross Faulkner and Hack & Son (Trademark & Patent Attorneys), regarding the departure of Faulkner from the business and his development of a similar cricket ball, with Sherrin belatedly trademarking his own brands, whilst receiving a signed undertaking from Faulkner to stop his trade.
 - F. Boxing - 1926 letters to Syd Sherrin re boxing gloves, one from Sammy Bear on "United States Fleet/ U.S.S.Pennsylvania" letterhead; other from boxing promoter Bidy Bishop in Seattle, USA.
 - G. 30pp correspondence between Sherrin, Alan Kippax and Hack & Son regarding Kippax's use of a Wallaby on his bats, with Hack defending Sherrin's Kangaroo trade mark: "it is quite certain in our minds that the Wallaby mark on the Kippax bat would be regarded as a Kangaroo". Of interest is the Kippax business defence that "the Emu and the wallaby is the design used by the Australian X1 on their caps"; Kippax's graceful response and one from WJ Sheehan for the bat maker - "we note that some finality has been reached regarding the definition of a Kangaroo and a Wallaby. We know now that the alleged Wallaby is a Kangaroo according to Webster's Dictionary". A final sad note from Hack that the Australian Bat Company - which used the Kangaroo trademark illegally - had gone into liquidation.
 - H. 2p overview from Hack & Son in 1945 regarding the trademarking of "REFEREE" and setting out the history of the trademarks for the "KANGAROO" device (1906), the "SHERRIN" (1922), the "PIONEER" and "COMMONWEALTH" (both 1926). Also Sherrin business card, illustrated envelopes, newspaper articles.

[A Pioneering Poster - The first poster to have a dramatic effect on how the Olympic Games were promoted internationally was issued by the Swedish Olympic Committee for the Stockholm Games of 1912, as part of a well-organised advertising campaign. The Committee, seeing it as an opportunity to present Sweden in a positive light to an international audience, organised a contest for the best design. Olle Hjortzberg's winning image represented a parade of nations marching towards the common goal of the Olympic Games. The first copies of the poster were printed in eight different language editions, but in response to repeated demands, the number of languages was doubled, so that eventually it was produced in sixteen languages, including Russian, Hungarian, Japanese, Turkish and Chinese].  - Enamel badge, with "8th Olympiad" at top, above discus thrower, made by Sydney jeweller W.Kerr. Rare.
[Ernest Austen represented Australia in the 10000m Walk at the 1924 Paris Olympics. Amazingly and controversially, he was warned in the first lap by the French judge who thought his gait doubtful. In the second lap the American judge ordered him off when he was lying third and was doing well. In later years, he commented "I was in third place, just behind the leaders and going along very easily. I thought I had a good chance but then an American judge came up and told me I was disqualified. I asked him why but he said he didn't know. You usually get two cautions before being disqualified but I wasn't aware of them. Nobody ever did tell me why I was outed." He broke down and went to the dressing rooms. It was his first disqualification in some 15 years of competitive walking. The pace at the time of his disqualification was very slow - equal to about 7:30 to the mile. In fact, of the 13 starters, only 6 finished in what was a farcical event. Australian officials were adamant that his style was satisfactory and the whole event deteriorated into an ugly affair. (Walking was consequently dropped from the 1928 Olympics and did not re-appear in the Olympics until 1932, when a 50 km roadwalk was introduced.)]. (Photo)$10,000 - $15,000
